II. Reasons for revision

Net sales are expected to exceed the previous forecast in both the Resins and Tall Oil Products business, driven by expanded sales of new paint resin products, and in the Electronic Materials business, driven by increased sales of resins for semiconductor resists, supported by strong market conditions. However, in the Paper Chemicals business, net sales are expected to fall short of the previous forecast in both Japan and China, due to declining product prices. In the Lawter business, because sales volumes have not grown as anticipated due to a slower-than-expected economic recovery in Europe and the United States, net sales are projected to fall short of the previous forecast. Overall, net sales performance is expected to be in line with the previous forecast.

Operating income is expected to exceed the previous forecast, supported by higher sales in the Resins and Tall Oil Products business and increased sales in the Paper Chemicals business in the United States.

Ordinary income is also projected to exceed the previous forecast, reflecting increases in operating income and higher equity-method investment income. In addition, net income attributable to Harima Chemicals Group, Inc. is expected to exceed the previous forecast, driven by the improvements in operating income and ordinary income.
